

Fundraising Tips to help you Go for the Gold!

- Set a fundraising goal. Challenge yourself and aim high (e.g. $500 - $1,000). Let everyone know this is your goal.
- Ask one person a day to sponsor you and don't be afraid to ask! People like to help out and are usually supportive and very generous.
- Ask for a pledge of at least $20. Most people will be able to give that much or more. If they can't, they'll let you know. Every donation, large or small, counts.
- Send a fundraising letter to everyone in your address book and on your e-mail list. Explain why you are participating and state your fundraising goal. Also, include a self addressed stamped envelope, making it easier to send back a donation. If you've participated before, explain why you are doing it again, thank them for their past support and let them know your new goal for this year.
- Record a message about the event on your answering machine or voicemail.
- Hang your pledge sheet up along with a poster in a visible area at work or school. Your colleagues will see it and make a pledge without you having to ask.
- Help potential donors visualize what the event is like. If you participated in previous years and have photos, copy and use them in your fundraising letters.
- Double your pledges! Find out if your company has a matching gift program by contacting your Human Resources Department. Also mention this to your sponsors. Their employers may also have a program they can take advantage of and increase your pledges.
- If you know someone who likes to swim or walk, encourage her/him to become a Designated Swimmer/Walker and help her/him raise money.
- If you are participating on behalf of a company or organization, set up a competition between departments to see who can raise the most money. Offer a prize for winners or have one department take the other out for lunch.
- Ask local businesses that you frequent for a donation. They may want to sponsor you!
- Coordinate a bake sale, car wash or other lunchtime event at work or school.
- Don't forget to pledge yourself!
